

Heartlines, and Values for Money

Why should church leaders be interested in equipping people to live with a Godly approach to money? Because money problems affect everyone, especially in these tough economic times. Money is at the heart of many marital and family conflicts. Heartlines is now offering a fresh new approach to tackling money issues.

What is the course about?

The core resource is a multi-media, downloadable course on these 5 money activities. There are 6 modules – the first being “God, My Values and Money”. Each module is around 30 minutes long, comprising of:

- Biblical principles
- Scriptures
- Real stories
- Tips and ideas on good practice
- Individual and group reflection
- Personal commitment to the future

The course examines our current attitudes, behaviour, and values around each of these, such as:

- Honesty in earning
- Responsibility in spending
- Self-control in saving
- Wisdom in borrowing
- Generosity in giving

How to?

By registering or signing in for the 6 courses, the courses can be downloaded from <https://heartlines.org.za/values-and-money/courses/values-money>.

Every course also comes with a printable handout. It can be done individually, in a small group, or even on Zoom. Ideally, a small group context works best. The course is fun, easy to do or to present, and worth the time. It will challenge the way one looks at and thinks about money.

More Information

For more information about Fathers Matter please contact Heartlines at fathersmatter@heartlines.org.za or phone +27-117712540. You can also contact the local Heartlines representative, Lubabalo Ngcolomba at 0614981886.

Heartlines is a South African-based NGO that aims to be part of addressing some of the issues facing society by helping move people from professed positive values to lived values.